Our aim was to determine the relationship between production of IL-1alpha and IL-1beta mRNA in various organs and the cell types involved during fetal development. The expression of IL-1alpha and IL-1beta mRNA was evaluated in normal murine fetuses aged 9.5, 12.5, 15.5, 17.5 and 18.5 days post coitum (dpc). Both IL-1alpha and IL-1beta mRNA were detected in all fetuses examined, in different organs at different stages of development. This was correlated with the presence of histologically identifiable leukocytes in various fetal organs (heart, liver, spleen, kidney, lung, and peritoneal exudate). Macrophages in the stromal and subepithelial areas of the spleen expressed IL-1alpha mRNA for a greater part of gestation examined than did lymphocytes. These findings were confirmed by indirect immunohistochemistry. Splenic macrophages did not express IL-1beta mRNA throughout gestation examined. IL-1beta mRNA expression was found mainly in leukocytes (lymphocytes and macrophages) and fetal kidney glomeruli f678ea9f9e
